Zoom privacy policy

- Zoom does not collect, store or sell any personal data of users and hosts on a meeting
- Zoom has recently acquired Key-base, an end-to-end data encryption company to further enhance and assure security to its users

In addition to the safety features provided by Zoom, we will also be taking the following measures to ensure that participants have a safe experience:

- In addition to the committee director, there will be trained Assistant Directors present to ensure that all committee proceedings are in order. There will also be logistics members from the conference tea, present during each committee session to ensure that there are no lapses in security and present for any support that is required
- We have ensured that committee sizes are limited so we have total control over the participants ensuring a qualitative experience
- The links to access each committee session will be shared with registered participants only and will not be made public
- A new meeting ID will be shared before each committee session
- Once all the attendees have arrived we will lock the meeting to prevent additional people from joining
